Reconciliation.

If thou wert lying, cold and still and white In death's embraces, O mine enemy! I think that if I came and looked on thee, I should forgive; that something in the sight Of thy still face would conquer me, by right Of death's sad influence, and I should see How pitiful a thing it is to be At foul with aught that s mortal.

So, to night, My soul unfurling her white flag of peace, Forestalling that dread hour when we may meet, The dead face and the living, fain would cry Across the years, "Oh, let our warfare cease! Life is so short, and hatred is not sweet; Let there be peace between us ere we die."

A gentleman walked out one day, And in a wildwood found A little lonesome girl, who lay Deserted on the ground. Now, should this man, kind hearted say, " I'll take this little miss And bring her up," now, tell us pray, Does be ( )?

An important case was tried before the Criminal Court of Columbia. An old colored man was on the witness stand. Tired of asking fruitloss questions, the district attorney put a leading " Have you ever been in the penitentiary? "You, sah." All eyes were now turned upon the witness. The district attorney smiled complacently, and resumed: "How many times have you been in the penitentiary?" "Twice, " How long were you there the first time?" " About two hours, sah." " How long the second time?" asked the attorney, rather cresifallen. " An hour, sah, I went there to whitewash a cell for a lawyer who had robbed his client." The attorney sat down, amid the laughter of the spectators.

The American organ of the Women's Rights movement suggests an improvement upon the ancient fashion of courtship. The marriageable youth of both sexes, according to this plan, would assemble at stated intervals, each one would write on a slip of paper the name of the person he or she would like to marry, the papers would then be submitted to the two discreet individuals, and it any two were found to have declared a mutual regard, the fact would be announced, and the marriage would follow. The remaining papers would be immediately de-

There is a good story told of President Hayes in connection with some appointments made to fill the vacancies in the United States army. A gentlemen who is distinguished in social life was extremely anxious to have the son of a warm friend designated for one of the vacancies. He called upon the President and made known his request. "You see, Mr. President," said be, in advocating the young man's claim, "his father is a distinguished ex-army officer, and his greatgrandfather was a gallant soldier in the army, and his great-grandfather was an officer in and his great-grandfather was an officer in the army, and his great-grandfather was an officer in the army.

All of a sudden the President said, " and this young man's father, great-grandfather, and even a more remote grandfather, have all been officers of the United States?" "Yes," came the reply. "Well," replied the President, with a merry chuckle, "don't you think it about time that some one in that family earned a living for himself?" Tux electric light has been applied to the bicycle before now to light up the road in front of it, but M. Trouvé, of Paris, is the first to do away with personal exertion and drive the vehicle itself by the electric current. He effects this by connecting each axle to a small electric motor of his own construction, in such a manner that the rotation of the moter turns the wheels. The motors are themselves driven by the current stored up in secondary batteries, carried by the velocipede. Recent trials with an English tricycle, which with its occupier, weighed nearly four hundredweight, could be maintained by the current at the speed of an ordinary cab for the space of an hour. M. Trouvé is now at work on an improved motor, which he hopes will suffice an improved motor, which he hopes will sume to drive the tricycle at a speed of twelve or fifteen miles an hour; and this motor, combined with Faure's secondary battery, ought to make the electric tricycle a practical invention, highly useful to the invalid or the weakly.
